Press Release Summary: Jaco, Costa Rica January 7, 2008 – Costa Rica's amazing atmosphere and people grab people's business and attention world wide. Web development and SEO firms flourish in this hot technology climate.

Press Release Body: Why are so many big technology companies, such as Intel and Hewlett Packard, moving resources to the small tropical country of Costa Rica? It could be for the amazing climate, but it is most likely due to the amazing people. Costa Rica has the highest educated and most technology inclined populace in Central America. The promise of a well educated and trained work force has brought many big name companies here and more coming every day.

This atmosphere has also attracted many smaller firms looking to build on an opportunity that is rare in the world. Paul Dillinger of CR Solutions Group, a Costa Rica based SEO and technology firm, had this to say: "We are blessed with amazing resources here in Costa Rica that you won't find anywhere else. I have reasonably priced qualified personnel lining up faster than I can hire them. When I moved my web design and SEO business here from Michigan's failing economy, I thought the move would be difficult. It has been the greatest experience of my life with business better than ever. I wish I had done it ten years ago."

Every day more companies are building their workforce in Costa Rica. Whether it is moving entire companies, creating branches, or just outsourcing, Costa Rica has become a gold mine for value minded business. This has proven especially true for SEO and search engine marketing consultants. Costa Rica is attracting more than technology. It is a hot sport for real estate investment as well. Many of the world's largest real estate companies are here, and they're all fighting to be on top.

This air of competition has proven to be fuel for the fire of these marketing experts who spend hours every day driving their clients up the rankings. Search engine optimization has proven to be a strong area in Costa Rica's growing technology profile. With the number of companies rising each day, and the prices being a fraction of the lowest US prices, Costa Rica has been gathering many clients from those locations as well.
