

Malvern House College: A Students' Home From Home

Released on: March 04, 2010, 5:58 am

Author: Macarena Palacios

Industry: Education

London, March 4, 2010: While the London weather might not seem particularly inviting right now, spring is almost upon us, and students internationally will now be looking at English language schools in the city to start in the summer. With so many options in the capital, choosing the right place can be difficult, but Malvern House College can meet most students' needs.

The college provides its students with a great range of courses, good opportunities for socialising and a choice of accommodation. The first step is to choose the right course. The college runs courses designed to meet the needs of learners at every level, and if you want to improve your skills across the board then the general English course is the one for you. Those needing to fast track their learning should choose the intensive course, with smaller classes to help students learn faster.

Others will have more specific needs. Pre-university courses are offered to students who want to go on to study at either undergraduate or postgraduate level in the UK. Students needing to study towards exams, either for further study or business reasons, will also find courses for them here.

While learning will always be the first consideration, prospective students will also be keen to know that the rest of their London experience will be a positive one. The college will help arrange accommodation for its students, with various options available. Student residences and house or flat shares are popular with those wanting to live with other students. Those who'd like to experience authentic London life will want to opt for the homestay scheme, which allows students to benefit from the language and cultural knowledge of a local family by renting a room in their home. There is a particularly good choice of accommodation for students who want to spend summer in London, as there are many halls of residence that are available only in summer.

Most students are keen to get out and experience London life as soon as they get here. The college can help students get to know their new home and make friends with their social programme. Students will also find that the college's central location– close to all the bars, shops and theatres – helps them settle in quickly and find their way around.

About Malvern college: Malvern House is one of many language schools London. It runs a very wide choice of courses at its three centrally located sites in Piccadilly, Kings Cross and Bloomsbury. This English school London, provides not only academic education but also a choice of housing and social events.

Contact Details: 65-67 Western Road
Intergen House
United Kingdom
Tel (UK): +44 (0) 870 760 68 68
makypalacios@gmail.com
<http://www.malvernhouse.com/>

~~~~~

Press release distributed via EPR Network (<http://express-press-release.net/submit-press-release.php>)