CONNECTICUT- The traditional methods of drug addiction treatment are being re-vamped and enhanced by drug rehabs worldwide. In an effort to provide the optimum chance for lifelong sobriety, many treatment programs have been expanding their current offerings to include what some may consider non-traditional drug rehab therapies.

While more traditional methodologies are still very much in use, their effectiveness has been augmented with the addition of what is termed holistic drug rehab treatment - that is, viewing the addicted individual's needs as a whole, instead of "in parts".

The pioneering of such methods began over 12 years ago at Mountainside Drug Rehab and Alcohol Treatment Center located in Canaan, Connecticut. Through advanced research, via theory in practice, they have created a program that offers a variety of different drug addiction treatment options that are personalized, depending on an individual's needs. As a result of their research and expanded treatment program, Mountainside has become the leader in effective drug rehab treatment worldwide and is viewed by treatment officials as providing the new and most effective standard for care.

"When we first started our program, many wondered if what we were doing would work," begins a spokesperson for Mountainside. "We were convinced that we were on to something and continued with our efforts. We put together a program that truly revolutionized drug rehab treatment worldwide. Treatment professionals recognized that what we were doing made sense and provided greater chances for individuals to remain clean and sober. Thus, we became known as the pioneers of holistic drug addiction treatment. We are constantly challenging ourselves and always evaluating the effectiveness of what we offer as we are committed to providing the most effective and the best treatment program in the drug rehab industry."

For more than 12 years, Mountainside Drug Rehab and Alcohol Treatment Center has led the way in offering an individualized alcohol and drug addiction treatment program.

Mountainside's treatment team is committed to providing quality, compassionate care to each individual in a tranquil, peaceful environment conducive to optimal recovery. The program won national attention and resulted in Mountainside being invited to Washington to meet with the White House Drug Czar, John P. Walters, who wanted to learn more about the innovative program offered at Mountainside.

In addition to its licensed and certified counselors and social workers, Mountainside provides medical services through an on-staff Nurse Practitioner and a Registered Nurse with specializations in drug addiction and alcohol treatment. Psychiatric services are available when needed.
